

CANOPY IMPACT REPORT

2013

Healthy Trees, Healthy Communities

Letter

from the Board Chair and Executive Director

Dear Friends of Canopy,

Susan Ellis and Catherine Martineau nature to children's lives by planting 1,000 trees over the course of five years. We've already planted close to 900 shade and fruit trees for kids at 27 schools and parks in Palo Alto, East Palo Alto, and Menlo Park. We couldn't have done it without the generous support of donors, partners, and dedicated volunteers like you!

Together we are creating a truly grassroots environmental movement. Since 1996, Canopy volunteers have planted over 3,400 trees in our communities and cared for thousands more young and mature trees in Palo Alto, East Palo Alto, and neighboring communities. That's an extraordinary achievement. You can read about our collective impact in 2013 inside this Annual Report.

At Canopy, we believe that local communities are the best guardians and stewards of our green spaces. That is why our programs

- invest in the future of our neighborhoods – by helping to create a robust urban canopy, improve access to nature in underserved areas, and educate youth about the environment;
- advance public understanding of trees and urban forestry – by offering a broad array of activities that include hands-on planting and tree care, free workshops, tree walks, and in-depth information resources; and
- advocate for the local urban forest – by providing advice and expertise to city and school district staff and elected officials, and by joining with other organizations to lobby for increased funding for urban forestry programs.

"Canopy emblemizes the kind of effort we need to maintain our deep relationship with nature and ignite that connection in young people especially."

Gretchen Daily,
Bing Professor of Environmental Science
at Stanford University

In the coming year, you will find us in the field, caring for our new community trees and planting more trees in schoolyards that currently stand bare. You will find us in classrooms, delivering environmental education lessons, and training budding ecologists on our Youth Staff. You will find us on Tree Walks throughout Palo Alto neighborhoods, sharing detailed information on tree selection and care.

We hope that you will join us at these and other Canopy events!

We count on you—our donors, friends and volunteers—for support, just as the community counts on Canopy to grow and protect a healthy urban environment.

With gratitude,

Susan Ellis
Board Chair

Growing greener and healthier local communities

Canopy's programs protect and grow the urban forest to create greener, healthier local communities. Our approach is twofold: planting and caring for public trees in parks, along streets, and on school campuses; and training and galvanizing residents, community groups, businesses and government bodies to care for the urban environment.

Planting and caring for trees

Canopy's staff, Board and dedicated corps of volunteers perform vital, hands-on maintenance of our urban forest through tree plantings, devoted care and regular monitoring. We plant hundreds of new trees annually. At the same time, we survey, prune, mulch and water thousands of saplings young trees during their earliest, most vulnerable years.

Training and galvanizing people

Canopy's programs place information and skills in the hands of community members, volunteers and partners, training and galvanizing people of all ages to become environmental stewards. In parallel, we leverage our deep domain knowledge and strong networks in school districts, cities, counties, and the state to carry out high-level advocacy for the urban forest.

Our outreach education programs offer something for everyone. Our flagship environmental education initiative reached more than 2,000 school children last year and benefitted our Youth Staff. We recently trained a new group of Planting Leaders—volunteers seeking to learn additional skills and take on a leadership role in urban tree care. Our fourteen free, newly updated, monthly arborist-led or self-guided neighborhood Tree Walks reflect the evolution of Palo Alto's urban landscape and enable residents to understand their neighborhoods better. The free online Arborist List helps people connect with tree experts while the Is Your Tree Thirsty? campaign, telephone Tree Hotline, and online Tree Library equip residents to safeguard their own trees with good advice and the latest arboriculture science. You can read about all of our programs online at www.canopy.org/impact2013.

Canopy provides fun, hands-on exposure to the urban forest, establishing a connection with nature.

Healthy Trees, Healthy Kids!

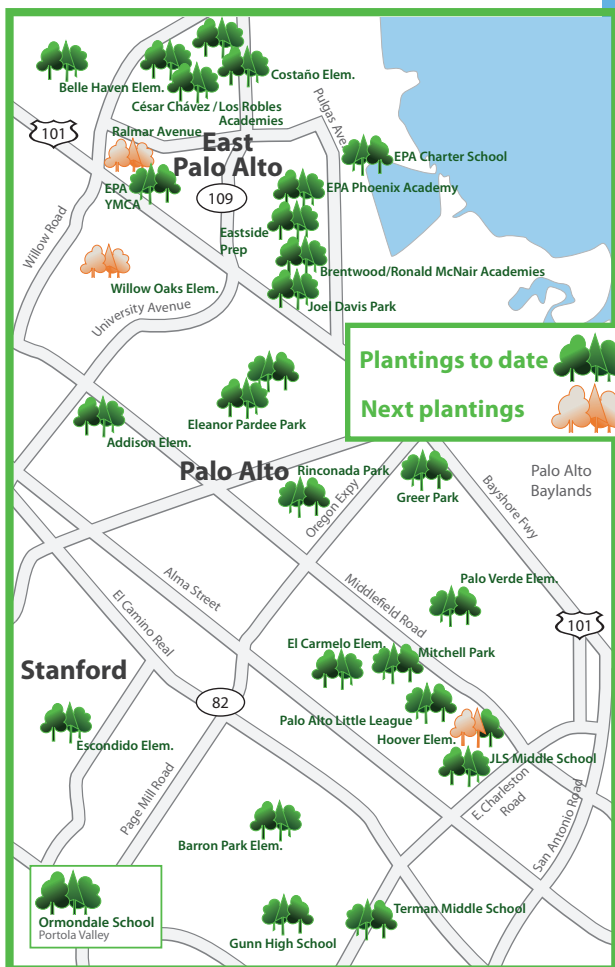

2013 has been an amazing year for Canopy's innovative Healthy Trees, Healthy Kids! program, our five-year initiative to plant 1,000 shade and fruit trees on tree-poor school campuses and nearby open space areas. Combining hands-on educational tree care activities with our customized curriculum to teach youth about the benefits of trees, we are creating a new generation of guardians and stewards of the urban canopy.

PROGRAM MILESTONES:

- We have planted trees at 27 local schools and parks, improving access to nature for 6,167 students.
- Our recent planting of 160 trees at East Palo Alto Charter School takes us to a total of 895 trees planted.
- Almost 1,600 dedicated volunteers have rolled up their sleeves to take part in our plantings and educational tree care activities. Thank you!

WHAT'S NEXT?

Planting trees involves more than just putting them in the ground. We're committed to ensuring that our young trees grow to maturity. We'll achieve this through careful stewardship of our urban forest and education in schools and throughout the community.
