THE AUDIENCE

Canopy events attract high net worth Bay Area residents who are engaged and influential in their communities. As a trusted community resource, Canopy works closely with community leaders, government officials, grassroots partners, local businesses, and neighborhood residents throughout the Midpeninsula. Our volunteers, donors, and organization leaders represent diverse sectors and backgrounds. What they share is a passion for bringing nature into local communities and a commitment to a vibrant urban forest for all.

Our roots are in Palo Alto, where much of our donor community resides. In East Palo Alto, we have strong partnerships with City staff, school administrators, community-based organizations, and residents. Canopy also has strong partnerships in Menlo Park, Mountain View, and Los Altos. Our dedicated volunteers join us from around the Bay Area—San Jose, Cupertino, Redwood City, San Francisco, and dozens of communities in between.

THE IMPACT

By growing our urban forests, Canopy creates healthier communities where people and nature thrive.

Trees improve human health and quality of life in profound ways. In addition to their environmental benefits, studies show that trees slow heartbeats, lower blood pressure, and relax brain wave patterns. Students with a view of trees outside their classroom show improved focus and better retention. Employees who look out office windows onto trees do better in their jobs. From cleaning our air to calming our minds and enhancing our senses, a healthy urban forest supports our most basic human needs, contributing to urban environments where people and nature thrive.

Over two decades, Canopy has partnered with local communities to plant nearly 5,000 trees, and empowered thousands of youth and adults to explore and connect with nature in their neighborhoods. Through community tree plantings, citizen science surveys, hands-on environmental education lessons, and in-depth teen internships, Canopy brings people of all backgrounds together to work towards healthy trees and healthy communities.

ABOUT CANOPY

CANOPY IS A RESPECTED ADVOCATE FOR THE PENINSULA'S URBAN FORESTS

For two decades, Canopy has grown, protected, and advocated for an essential community resource: urban trees. Our impact is far-reaching, in local communities and beyond.

Twenty years ago, Canopy's founders became a voice for the trees of Palo Alto. Canopy's early research, advocacy, and grassroots efforts helped create and sustain Palo Alto's vibrant urban forest and tree protection policies, which have served as models for cities around the world.

Twelve years ago, Canopy put down roots in neighboring East Palo Alto, planting and caring for trees in schools, parks, and neighborhoods where greenery was sorely needed.

Today, Canopy's programs have a direct impact on the health and wellbeing of communities throughout the Midpeninsula. In 2018 alone, with the help of our dedicated volunteers, donors, and partners, we:

- ♦ Planted 323 new trees and tended more than 700 young trees across dozens of community sites;
- ♦ Reached more than 1,800 school kids with high-quality, hands-on environmental science lessons;
- ♦ Provided opportunities for more than 5,000 people to explore, steward, and celebrate our local urban forests.

Our vision is a day when every resident of the Midpeninsula can step outside to walk, play, and thrive under the shade of healthy trees. We welcome the opportunity to partner with you in bringing this vision to life!

CANOPY HAS A TRACK RECORD OF SUCCESSFUL EVENTS.

Canopy has a history of bringing inspirational leaders, scientists, and nature stewards to share their expertise and call-to-action with our diverse audience. Over the last decade, we have hosted:

- ♦ 2006 - Wangari Maathai, 2004 Nobel Peace Laureate and founder of the Greenbelt Movement
- ♦ 2008 - Sir Thomas Pakenham, prize-winning author, historian, and arborist
- ♦ 2009 - E.O. Wilson, American biologist, researcher, theorist, naturalist and author
- ♦ 2011 - Richard Louv, Author, journalist, and nature advocate
- ♦ 2013 - Gretchen Daily, award-winning researcher, biologist, and author
- ♦ 2018 - Hope Jahren, award-winning scientist, ecologist, and author

We consistently deliver exceptional and memorable event experiences for guests and sponsors alike. Our last fundraising gala in 2018 integrated approximately 30 sponsors, 240 attendees, and a strong foundation of media coverage.

ABOUT DAVE MUFFLY

Canopy is thrilled to honor Dave Muffly, the acclaimed arborist affectionately dubbed Tree Whisperer by the Los Angeles Times.

Dave is the charismatic former Senior Arborist at Apple, who selected, grew, and planted the 9,000 trees within the 175-acre Apple Park headquarters in Cupertino, bringing to life Steve Job's vision of a tree rich park resembling the Stanford hills, where employees readily enjoy the benefits of nature.

Dave's passion for trees, oaks in particular, developed on the Stanford campus, planting native trees as a member of the Magic community, while earning a degree in mechanical engineering. From there, Dave became Canopy's first program director, orchestrating the planting of 500 trees in Palo Alto neighborhoods. Later, while serving on the Canopy board of directors, Dave designed Canopy's East Palo Alto Tree Initiative, the award winning planting of 1,000 drought tolerant trees along the Bayshore freeway. With some of the highest survival rates ever recorded by science, these trees provide invaluable benefits to the community as they scrub the air from nearby exhaust pollutants.

Dave's wisdom and insight, gained from 30 years of observing, growing, planting, researching, and stewarding nearly 100,000 trees, is unparalleled and highly sought after. His mission in life is to create the best possible urban forests in California, capable of adapting to the changing conditions brought by climate change. He's continuing his research and experiments with species native from other areas, to select and grow those that he believes will survive and thrive in California. He's playing an instrumental role in influencing the tree nursery industry not only to grow these species, but also to adopt innovative growing techniques.

“Everyone wants to talk about planting trees. I want to talk about establishing trees.” - Dave Muffly
